

Hearsay

henfette.campagne@lawyersweekly.com

Namely...

For better or worse, as Americans we cannot deny our more-is-better ideology.

From Manifest Destiny to the American Dream, we have since our inception been compelled to strive for more. And while unseemly excess may have caught up to certain naughty parties on Wall Street, the following Massachusetts firms see no reason to cut back — on their mastheads, at least:

Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale & Dorr, Boston
Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, Boston
Phillips, Silver, Talman, Aframe & Sinrich, Worcester
Rubin, Weisman, Colasanti, Kajko & Stein, Andover & Lexington
Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak & Stewart, Boston
Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Gloysky & Popeo, Boston
Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, Boston
Vaughan, Dale, Hunter, Stetina & Beaudette, Nantucket
Brennan, Dain, Le Ray, Wiest, Torpy & Garner, Boston
Ryan, Boudreau, Randall, Kirkpatrick & Baker, South Hadley
Adler, Cohen, Harvey, Wakeman & Guekguzian, Boston
Chartier, Ogan, Brady, Sarnacki, Leahy & Rooney, Holyoke
Zizik, Powers, O'Connell, Spaulding & Lamontagne, Westwood
Rosenberg, Schapiro, Englander, Chicoine & Leggett, Boston
McLaughlin, Richards, Mahaney, Biller & Woodyshek, Natick
Angoff, Goldman, Manning, Wanger, Hynes & Dunlap, Norwood
Shilepsky, O'Connell, Hartley, Casey, Michon, Yelen & Robb, Boston
Gunderson, Dettmer, Stough, Villeneuve, Franklin & Hachigian, Waltham
Wainwright, Wainwright, Wainwright, Wainwright & Wainwright, Brockton

ISTOCKPHOTO.COM